Publication note: Works cleanly as a short chapbook chapter, but would benefit from expansion if you want it sold as a standalone novella.

Cover direction: Neon casino imagery with ruined gold accents and a single character focus.

Pluto Dies Writing

Greed District, Scene One

Category: Dark fantasy / character vignette

Keywords: dark fantasy, greed district, character monologue, devil fiction, vignette

A short character piece set inside the Hypno Casino, where the King of Greed realizes sacrifice has finally made him human.

Original prose vignette by Cole Avery. The draft is self-authored and does not use external source text.

The Scene

The piece opens in the ruined luxury of the Hypno Casino after a violent collapse. Pluto, bruised and nearly spent, protects a vulnerable companion and realizes the district's endless appetite means nothing if he cannot choose one person over the machine.

The scene works because it turns greed into sacrifice instead of reward.

Publishing Note

This reads best as a sharp novella chapter or a prologue volume. It is short, but it has a complete emotional turn and a strong visual identity.
