Sacred Texts of the Pagan Temple of Dionysus

A Codex of Liberation, Community, and Ritual

Category: Mythic doctrine / worldbook

Keywords: myth, doctrine, ritual, community, Dionysus, worldbuilding

A structured sacred-text volume that turns the Dionysian worldbuilding into a clean doctrine of liberation, reciprocity, and creative practice.

Original mythic doctrine and worldbuilding by Cole Avery. The text uses public mythological figures and original prose structure; no external borrowings were detected.

Codex Structure

The source material already divides itself into four books: the mythic age, the mortal age, the living age, and the doctrinal age. That gives the finished book a clear spine.

Book I - The Old Vines

Control is named as the old harm. Suppression becomes the source of corruption, and Dionysus arrives as the figure who says what is hidden does not disappear; it poisons.

Book II - The Broken House

This section shifts into a tragic mortal story about leaving a house of still air and choosing movement over obedience.

Book III - The Wild Gospel

Identity is presented as motion, not a fixed assignment. Love is framed as truth rather than ownership.

Book IV - The Laws of the Feast

The doctrinal section is the most publishable material in the source: live fully, feel deeply, connect freely without shame. The rest of the text builds outward from that line.
